

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

According to the present invention, there is provided a communication system which makes it possible not only to reproduce a great variety of longer-time response messages but also record the other party's longer-time messages. This invention is characterized by comprising means for judging whether or not a portable communication unit has received a call from the other party via the wireless interface of a personal computer and the wireless interface of the portable communication unit and means for, if it is judged that there has been a call from the other party, transmitting the response message recorded in the personal computer to the other party.